

THE ROMAN DENARII HOARD IN THE ERİMTAN COLLECTION

MELİH ARSLAN - ÜLKÜ DEVECİOĞLU

The hoard is in the collection of Mr. Yüksel Erimtan who is a private collector of ancient cultural objects registered at the Anatolian Civilizations Museum in Ankara. The hoard which consists of 246 silver Roman coins was purchased in 1993 and registered in the inventory book. The 243 of 246 coins are denarii and three of them are antoninianii (see catalogue no. 239, 242, and 244). Those three antoninianii belong to Elagabalus, the last emperor represented in the treasure.

The hoard fundamentally encompasses the reigns of 13 emperors (see. Table I). The coins in the treasure were struck in the name of 20 different individuals (emperor, empress and caesar) with their likenesses. Some emperors were also represented when they had been heirs to the throne (caesar). So there are a total of 23 groups as emperors, caesars and empresses in the treasure (see Table II). The catalogue here shows the coins chronologically listed depending on the Table II. As it is evident in the Table II the Erimtan Denarii Hoard exhibits a very homogenous entity embracing the coins of 20 individuals from 13 reigns. From Vespasian to Elagabalus all emperors are chronologically represented. Only the coins of Pertinax, Didius Julianus and Pescennius Niger, short term emperors of the Severan period lack in this treasure. However, one emperor from the same period Clodius Albinus is represented with two coins (Cat. No. 97-98).

Beside denarii there are only three antoninianii in the treasure. The emperor Caracalla introduced this new silver denomination valued 2 Denarii for the first time in A.D. 215. The new denomination was named antoninianus after the Emperor Caracalla's official name Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. The antoninianii were in use until the reign of the Emperor Diocletianus (A.D. 284-305). Although the antoninianii were projected to be heavier and larger than their predecessors their silver content was less than the denarii and in time silver in those coins continued to decrease until eventually it remained as a silver wash on the surface of bronze coins.

The denarius, the fundamental denomination of Rome was first issued during the Roman Republic in 211 B.C. This denomination was continued to be used until the end of the Roman Empire. Although they weighed approximately 4.00 grams in the beginning they were drastically decayed both in weight and silver content toward the end of the imperial times due to weakening of the Roman Empire and the economic failure.

The Erimtan hoard comprises the time period from the reign of Vespasianus (A.D. 69-79) to Elagabalus (A.D. 218-222). The change in the standard weight of the denarii can be observed in this treasure of coins that span a period of about 150 years.

The hoard coins belong to three different dynasties in the Roman Empire. In the first group are the coins of the Flavian dynasty emperors (Vespasianus, Titus and Domitianus). However, the coins of Titus and Domitianus were struck in the reign of their father Vespasianus while they were caesars. This is the least crowded group of the hoard.

The second group encompasses the Antonine dynasty emperors. The coins of Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian, Antoninus Pius, Marcus Aurelius, Lucius Verus, Commodus and their families are in the hoard. Commodus (33 coins) and Antoninus Pius (14 coins) are represented with the most coins among the Antonine dynasty emperors.

The third and the last group contains the coins of the Severan dynasty emperors including Septimius Severus, Clodius Albinus, Caracalla, Geta, Elagabalus and their families. While Caracalla is represented both with his caesar and augustus period coins, Geta is only represented as caesar. There are the coins of empresses such as Julia Domna and Plautilla in this group. The most coins in the treasure are in this group. Furthermore emperors and empress with the most coins Septimius Severus (52 coins), Caracalla (37 coins) and Julia Domna (28 coins) are also in this group.

So, while the Severans are represented with the most coins, Antonines were represented with fewer and finally the Flavians represented with the fewest coins.

The 243 denarii and the 3 antoninianii of the treasure embrace a time period of 150 years from Vespasian to Elagabalus. The Elagabalus' coins of A.D. 222 from the Rome mint (cat. No. 241-245) and the coin of the same year from the Antiochia mint (cat. no. 246) are the terminus post quem of the hoard. The treasure must have been buried after that period.

The great majority of the coins of the hoard are from the mint of Rome. It is observed that very few coins come from the eastern – Syrian mints (Antiochia, Emesa and Laodiceia). While there are only single examples from the mints of Antiochia (no. 246), and Emesa (no. 146), there are 9 examples from the Laodiceia (no. 147-150; 178; 212-215) mint. All of the 11 coins from the eastern mints belong to the Severan dynasty period emperors (Septimius Severus, Caracalla ve Elagabalus). It is known that those eastern mint coins were struck to pay the mercenaries in the Parthian campaign.

In terms of burial date the Erimtan Hoard is consistent with the other contemporary Asia Minor hoards both in homogeneousness and chronology. The first of the similar denarii hoards is known as the Haydere (Aydın-Bozdoğan Treasure-1982). The original number of coins in the Haydere hoard is 5578 and 2330 of them are in the İzmir Museum. The lot in the İzmir Museum consists of 1113 denarii and 1216 antoninianii and they were first published by P. Aydemir and his friends¹. The Haydere Hoard encompasses a time period of 200 years from Vespasian to Gallienus. The coins from this hoard, except the antoninianii of the Severan period have a lot in common with the Erimtan Denarii Hoard. Another similar treasure is the one that was unearthed in the Koçoğlu village of Manyas Township of Balıkesir province in 1985. The court documents indicated that there were 2469 coins in the treasure when it was first discovered. However only 210 of those coins were seized and surrendered to the Bahkesir Museum. The whereabouts of the rest of the coins is unknown. The 210 coins from that hoard were brought to the Anatolian Civilizations Museum for inspection in 1987 and they still remain there. The 208 of the 210 coins in the Manyas Hoard are denarii and also two are drachms minted in Amisus. The treasure spans a time period of 100 years from the emperor Otho to Antoninus Pius. The Manyas Denarii Treasure was published by this author in 1996². In terms of content this treasure resembles the Erimtan Treasure. There are two more denarius hoards by the names the Sulakyurt Treasure and the Yatağan Treasure in the Anatolian Civilizations Museum. The Yatağan Hoard is registered with the inventory number 1861 in the museum. 1559 is the inventory number for the Sulakyurt Treasure. There are 243 denarii in the Yatağan Hoard while the Sulakyurt Hoard consists of 429 denarii. The earliest coins in both treasures are from the reign of Antoninus Pius. The Yatağan Hoard coins ranges from Antoninus Pius (A.D. 138-161) to Gordianus III (A.D. 238-244) and the Sulakyurt coins come to an end with the coins of Maximinus I (235-238). Those two hoards that exhibit great similarities to the Erimtan Hoard were published twice by Ms. Yıldız Kızılkaya³.

Another similar denarius hoard to the Erimtan one has recently been discovered in the vicinity of the Kırıkkale province. The 110 denarii from that hoard were purchased by the Anatolian Civilizations Museum and they were registered with the inventory numbers 71-110-99. Later, I found out that the rest of the lot which constituted the great majority of the hoard was sold to the Ereğli (the Black Sea region) Museum. It is said that approximately 500 to 600 of the Ereğli coins are denarii. The 110 coins part of the Kırıkkale Hoard in the Anatolian Civilizations Museum begins with Emperor Otho (A.D. 69) and ends with Emperor Commodus (A.D. 177-192). This hoard also spans a time period of 150 years as in the example of the Erimtan Hoard⁴. A hoard of 13 Roman silver coins was unearthed during the 1977 excavations of ancient Erythrai and it was published⁵. The Silver Erythrai Hoard consists of the coins of Domitian to Septimius Severus, a time span of 100 years. Three of those coins are in the cistophor denomination and 10 of them are denarii. The Erythrai Hoard coins are contemporary and similar to the coins of the Erimtan ones. The 2306 - silver coin hoard found in Viuz-Faverges, Alta Savoia, France contains 1780 denarii, 525 antoninianii and 1 Amisus drachm. The French Hoard embraces the time period from Nero (A.D. 64) to Maximinus (A.D. 235)⁶. This large silver coin hoard found outside of Anatolia is contemporary of and it carries similarities with the Erimtan coins in terms of denarii.

There are a few other published hoards that are less contemporary of the Erimtan Hoard. One of those, which was found in the Agora excavation of ancient Iasos begins with coins of Caracalla and continues until the reign of Gallienus. Only 11 of the 2997 coins are denarii while the 2986 are antoninianii⁷.

Metrology: The coin with the least weight in the Erimtan Denarii Hoard is the one of Commodus weighing 2.26 grams (see no. 76). The last coin in the catalog (no. 246) weighs 3.91 grams and it is also the heaviest denarius coin in the treasure. Except this coin of Elagabalus there are two more rather heavy denarii in the hoard. Both of those two coins weigh 3.82 grams (see no. 133 and 192). The coin number 133 belongs to Septimius Severus and the number 192 belongs to Caracalla. Furthermore the three antoniniani in their own denomination are the heaviest coins in the hoard. The number 239 coin is 4.17 grams and the number 242 coin is 5.56 grams while the number 244 coin weighs 4.95 grams. In general the majority of the coins in the hoard are over 3.00 grams each. The weights of 35 of the coins range from 3.50 grams to 3.91 grams. Furthermore the weights of 43 coins change between 2.26 grams and 2.99 grams. The total weight of the hoard is 800.54 grams and the average coin weight is 3.25 grams. In general the coins of the hoard are well preserved and they don't seem to have worn out in circulation.

The three emperors with the most coins are predominant in the hoard: Septimius Severus (52 coins), Caracalla (37 coins) and Commodus (31 coins). Separately Julia Domna also has 28 coins. When the coin weights of those three emperors are compared, one observes that the majority of the coins of Commodus are less than 3.00 grams. The 19 of the 31 Commodus denarii are under 3.00 grams. The heaviest of the Commodus coins is 3.57 grams. The majority coins in the Septimius Severus group of 52 denarii are more than 3.00 grams. Only a small part of the 52 coins, 11 of them are less than 3.00 grams. The denarius that weighs the least among the Septimius Severus coins is 2.49 grams. The Caracalla coins are better preserved than the others and most coins are heavier than 3.00 grams. Only 5 of the 37 Caracalla coins weigh less than 3.00 grams. Only 2 of the 28 Julia Domna coins are lighter than 3.00 grams while all the others have an average weight of approximately 3.40 grams and they are very well preserved.

Die Connections: The obverse and reverse die connections among the coins of the hoard have also been investigated. It was found that some examples come from the same dies. All of the same dies are obverse dies. Although there are some very similar ones no die connections could be determined among the reverses. The coins that come from the same obverse dies are as follows:

- 1-) number 85 and 86 Commodus coins.
- 2-) number 116 and 117 Septimius Severus coins.
- 3-) number 131 and 133 Septimius Severus coins.
- 4-) number 181 and 182 Caracalla Caesar coins.
- 5-) number 218 and 219 Plautilla coins.

Conclusion and Assessment: The Erimtan silver Roman coins hoard that consists of 243 denarii and 3 antoniniani was unearthed in 1993. Although the find location is not known it is almost certain that it was found in Anatolia. We also don't have any information about the original content of the hoard but it is possible that it might be a bigger hoard because as experience proved larger treasures like this are generally sold after they are partitioned.

Even though the great majority of the coins of the Erimtan Denarii Hoard are known types the Faustina II coin (cat. No.59) is not seen in the present publications. Cohen and RIC catalogues only have the gold aureus variations of the same type. In addition, the number 128 coin of Septimius Severus with IVNO REGINA legend is also a new type.

It is observed that while most coins in the hoard come from the Rome mint there is a certain number of examples from the so called eastern mints, namely Antiochia, Emesa ve Laodiceia ad Mare of Syria. Especially the Syrian mint coins of the latest emperor in the treasure indicate the latest time of use of the hoard coins and their relationship with the conflict between Rome and Parthia. To finance the Parthian campaigns Romans mostly depended on coins produced in the Syrian mints as well as the mint of Rome.

The coins of the hoard represent consecutive emperors and span a time period of approximately 150 years. The Erimtan Denarii Hoard in its present entirety might be a coin collection of a person or a personal accumulation as well as a collected sum of a tax office. Regardless of its intention it is a very important development that such a valuable hoard found by chance is recorded in the collection of a respected collector. Without the initiative of Mr. Yüksel Erimtan who always adores ancient art works and supports scientific research it would be impossible to publish this valuable hoard in its entirety.
